

Lesson 9

WALT: recap previously learnt key grammatical features.

You have already learnt many of the key features of an explanation text as they appear in different text types. Below are some of the features for you to recap. Check you understand what each feature is by completing the relevant challenge.

Rhetorical question A question that does not require an answer. It makes you think/react. Use the rhetorical questions starters to write three rhetorical questions. E.g. Why not visit the most exciting place in the world? Do you love... Why not... Who would argue that...	Subheading A heading given to a subsection of a piece of writing. Choose a subheading for this paragraph. _____ Chocolate is made from cocoa beans. The cocoa beans come from cacao pods, which are grown on cacao trees. The Ivory Coast grow and harvest the most amount of cocoa beans in the world!
Present tense A grammatical term used for verbs that describe action happening right now. Change this past tense sentence into present tense. Bob ate his sandwich. _____	Facts Something that is known or proved to be true. Write a fact about you. _____ _____
Subordinating conjunction Introduces a subordinate clause.  Select the appropriate subordinating conjunction. You can go first _____ you are older. I went to bed _____ I brushed my teeth.	Co-ordinating conjunctions Joins two main clauses together.  Select the appropriate coordinating conjunction. I love chocolate _____ I love apples. He hates spiders _____ he ran out of the room.
Homophones Two or more words that have the same pronunciation, but different meanings, origins, or spelling. Write the missing homophones. Pour _____ Bored _____ Their _____	Fronted adverbials Phrases or words at the start of a sentence, which are used to describe the action that follows. Usually tells you when, where, why or how. E.g. In the classroom, Miss Northwood marked the books. Add a fronted adverbial at the start of each sentence. _____, I went to school. _____, she rode her bike. _____, my dog escaped!